Double murder trial re-opens

The trial has re-started of Obina Ezeoke, of no fixed address, accused of double murder over the deaths of 21 year-old psychology student Bervil Kalikaka-Ekofo, 21, and mother-of-nine Annie Besala Ekofo, 53, in East Finchley in September 2016.

Ezeoke, of no fixed address, allegedly entered through the unlocked door of Mrs Besala Ekofo's flat in Elmshurst Crescent, N2, and shot the pair. Ezeoke was back in court at the Old Bailey in April. His original trial was halted a year ago when the judge in the case, Judge Stephen Kramer QC, was taken ill with a bad back after almost a month of hearing evidence. The case continues.

Pavilion in the park still in limbo

By Diana Cormack

With the ever deteriorating state of the pavilion in Cherry Tree Wood causing local concern, it seems that the long-running saga surrounding this building is set to continue.

The Archer's regular requests to Barnet Council for updates on progress invariably result in a reply regarding on-going meetings between them and the lessee.

In the latest, received on 13 April, a council spokesman said: "The negotiations and meetings are progressing positively and we aim to reach a final resolution in the coming weeks."

Readers may remember sudden action being taken to board up and fence off the building immediately before the East Finchley Community Festival two years ago. Since then there has been no outward sign of activity.

Can we hope for a decision finally to be taken about its fate before this year's East Finchley festival on Sunday 24 June?

The pavilion, after it was made safe two years ago.

Dirty streets

East Finchley resident David Attfield has started a petition calling on Barnet Council to keep the borough's streets clean.

He claims Barnet's pavements and verges are in a terrible state, bins are often overflowing and the street scene generally is neglected. Sign his 'Dirty

Streets of Barnet' petition online here by Sunday 20 May to give it a chance of being discussed by Barnet Council: <https://bit.ly/2KldLFR>.
